INSTITUTE OF Communicology®

1 What is Communicology?

Literally translated, Communicology means the study of what is common.

The education in Communicology gives you the competence to create communication and change processes more effectively, efficiently and systemically.

2 How is the education conducted?

Communicology is a meta-discipline that studies, compares and classifies knowledge from other disciplines. The training involves all your senses, learning by using not only your ears and eyes but by also using feel.

The combination of interactive teaching, working in groups, personal experiences, physical movement and practical application creates an intense and systemic learning experience.

3 What will change?

You will get the competence to deliver quality change work by having the essential tools in your toolbox and knowing how to use them precisely.

In addition, you will strengthen the competence in your field and get a better and more profound understanding about the keys which lead to quality performance.

"We are forever grateful for what Jorunn and Truls, and the discipline of Communicology has taught us. Communicology has had a strong influence in our growth as coaches and our development as human beings."
